*Prof. Mwafaq M. Dandan

Professor of Economics Amman University College for Financial and Administrative Science Albalqa Applied University

Corresponding Email: mwafaq70@bau.edu.jo

Keywords: Quality Management, Jordanian Universities

This study aims at identifying to what extent the principles of total quality management are applied at the Jordanian universities. The study population includes all the department heads at the Jordanian universities for the academic year (2017/ 2018). The study sample is chosen by using the stratified random method. To achieve the objectives of the study, the researcher developed the study tool. Both the validity and reliability of the tool are verified. The researcher distributed the tool over the sample of the study and carried out the relative statistical processing. The results show that the standards of total quality management applied at the Jordanian universities is not satisfactory enough. The results also, show that there are no statistically significant differences at the (0.05=) level attributes to (gender, specialization, and years of experience). Accordingly, the researcher recommends to hold training courses and field workshops to activate the standards of total quality management

MEDICAL, MEDICINES & HEALTH SCIENCES

Analyzing Operation Room Utilization in a Private Medical Center in Israel

^{1*}Yossi Weiss, ² Royi Barnea

Keywords: Operation Room, Utilization, Hospital Management, Operation Rooms Optimization.

Introduction: Surgery is a core activity in hospitals. Operating rooms are one of the most important and vital junctions in medical centers. The operating rooms and their staff are a valuable infrastructure resource, whose availability and preparedness affect human life and quality of care. This topic was also addressed by the Israel's State Comptroller report (2017). Aims: The aim of the study was to formulate operational recommendations for improving the utilization of operating rooms. Methods: a wide mapping of the current working processes in the operating rooms was performed. All surgeries between August 2016 to March 2017 were included (overall of 23,585 surgeries) and different parameters (utilization, delays, working hours, capacity, etc.) were defined. Results: The average OR utilization in the measured period was 79% with differences between the examined period months. We divided the lost OR time into two major sub-factors: Spacing between planned blocks (9% of lack of utilization) and partial utilization of operating room time (12%). Potential annual increase in income and increment of OR hours due to improved operating room utilization was also calculated. Discussion and conclusions: Our data suggests an overall good operation room utilization snapshot, compared to the current situation in the healthcare system in Israel. Type of procedures and working hours were suggested as a possible explanatory factors. Increasing OR utilization would necessarily result with improving OR's availability and an improvement in quality of care. The importance of this issue and advantages of increasing OR utilization were discussed and future plans in order to achieve higher utilization was suggested.
